Hi Diana,

Thanks for sending along those boards.

As the study moves into design, please consider the following comments from Peel Public Health.

- With the planned LRT, it will be important to enable prioritize active transportation to enable first and last mile connections for transit users. While existing infrastructure on Centre View is not supportive of active transportation (lack of appropriate infrastructure such as MUT/bike lane), the current EA has the potential to set a precedent for future studies/development of the area. Connectivity of pedestrian and cycling routes will be important in order for active transportation to be a feasible option for residents.
- Consider the feasibility of some additional forms of protective infrastructure/physical separation for cyclists – for example, on the indicated bike lanes, the use of bollards can increase cyclist comfort. Furthermore, within the roundabout, ensure there is clear indication about the routing of pedestrians and cyclist and their potential interaction with vehicles.
- Given the leisure/entertainment destinations in the immediate vicinity of the study area, it will likely serve as a destination for transit users at the beginning or end of their trip. Therefore, consider protecting cyclist and pedestrian movement within the plaza (crosswalks, signage, flashing beacons) to increase safety and comfort.

Thank you,
Sanya
