It's been quite the year for Bianca Andreescu.

The Mississauga tennis star skyrocketed up the Women's Tennis Association rankings after winning a number of prestigious tournaments, including the U.S. Open in September - and was named the Lou Marsh Trophy winner as the top Canadian athlete of 2019.

The week after her Lou Marsh Trophy win on Dec. 10, the 19-year-old signed a partnership deal with Gatorade, becoming the latest elite athlete to join the brand's stable of stars, which includes Sidney Crosby, Marie-Philip Poulin, Serena Williams and more.

2019 was an eventful year for Mississauga tennis star Bianca Andreescu.

As well, she is among the top 10 in a variety of Google Canada's 2019 Year in Search lists.

Andreescu was revealed as Google Canada's top trending Canadian and was the second most trending person behind former Toronto Raptor and 2019 NBA Finals MVP Kawhi Leonard.

Furthermore, she earned the second top trending Canadian moment of the decade behind the Raptors' championship run.

Andreescu was also 2019's third top trending Canadian news topic and the seventh top trending search topic in Google Canada's lists.

In addition to winning the U.S. Open in September, Andreescu also won the Indian Wells Open and the Rogers Cup earlier this year.
