BEGINNING:

THE NEW MISSISSAUGANS

P. R. lady put Mississauga on the map before map was drawn

By ARTHUR LOWE

Two of the nicest things about Eleanor Blake are that she says what she means, and she says it distinctly in one of the most pleasing voices I have ever listened to. Not a throaty voice, not commanding, not loud — but the sort of voice that holds attention because of its soft-spoken clarity.

You don't know Eleanor? Sorry, I thought everybody in Mississauga did. She is the girl who was mainly responsible for the success of Toronto Township's Centennial celebrations, acclaimed among the finest in the land. Not the biggest, by any manner of means, nor the most pretentious, but the most effective in arousing pride of country, and pride in the present, past and future of South Peel.
