More honours for ex-director

MN May 7, 2003

Harold Brathwaite is picking up yet another award as a champion of education.

The Mississauga resident, who retired last summer as director of education at the Peel District School Board, is one of three Canadians being honoured May 8 by The Learning Partnership.

The tribute dinner at the Metro Convention Centre for "Champions of Education" will also honour McGill University Principal Dr. Bernard Shapiro and ATCO President and CEO Nancy Southern.

Upon his retirement from the board last year, Brathwaite was named the first recipient of the Peel Board's "champion" award at its annual Showcase of Excellence celebration.

Brathwaite now serves as an advisor to the president of Seneca Community College.

The Learning Partnership is a non-profit organization of business, education, government, labour and community leaders dedicated to strengthening public education.
