Thirteen Mississauga citizens will receive prestigious Bicentennial awards for exemplary volunteer work in the community.

The Mississaugans — four women and nine men — are among 1,984 Ontario residents who will receive special gold-plated award medals at ceremonies across the province this fall.

During her trip to Canada this fall, Queen Elizabeth will be presented with a solid gold replica of the volunteers' Bicentennial medal. The official announcement of the award-winners will be made in August.

Nominated by city council to receive the award are: Rev. Maury Blair, Barbara Hammond, Gary Clipperton, Richard Clewes, Claude Racey, Alberto Cataudella, Elias (Louis) Velianou, A.J. Brands, Jeffery (Ed) Armstrong, Donna Howard, Carole Berry, Harry Hassal Sr., and Lucy Turnbull.

Richard Clewes, of Eglinton Ave. W., "has been instrumental and a driving force in the planning and development of the Credit Valley Hospital, Mississauga's newest hospital," reads his Bicentennial award nomination form.

As chairman of the Credit Valley Hospital board, his "extraordinary" volunteer efforts have contributed to the success of the community fundraising project, says Mississauga council, who nominated him.

Clewes and the hospital's fundraising committee hope to raise $8.5 million toward the construction of the Credit Valley Hospital from donations by residents and local businesses.
