Thirteen Mississauga citizens will receive prestigious Bicentennial awards for exemplary volunteer work in the community.

The Mississaugans — four women and nine men — are among 1,984 Ontario residents who will receive special gold-plated award medals at ceremonies across the province this fall.

During her trip to Canada this fall, Queen Elizabeth will be presented with a solid gold replica of the volunteers' Bicentennial medal. The official announcement of the award-winners will be made in August.

Nominated by city council to receive the award are: Rev. Maury Blair, Barbara Hammond, Gary Clipperton, Richard Clewes, Claude Racey, Alberto Cataudella, Elias (Louis) Velianou, A.J. Brands, Jeffery, (Ed) Armstrong, Donna Howard, Carole Berry, Harry Hassal Sr., and Lucy Turnbull.

Harry Hassal Sr., of Second Line W., "has been a strong voice in our community" as a businessman and spokesman for local branches of the Royal Canadian Legion (RCL), says his nominator, Ward 3 councillor Rudy Skjarum.

Hassal was president of the Port Credit Legion for more than five years. He founded the T.L. Kennedy branch of the Legion and served a three-year term as president. He was with the Provincial Command of the RCL and is an honorary member of the Mississauga Rotary Club.

Sixty years ago he founded Hassal's Florists, which continues as Mississauga's oldest established retail florist business.
