Thirteen Mississauga citizens will receive prestigious Bicentennial awards for exemplary volunteer work in the community.

The Mississaugans — four women and nine men — are among 1,984 Ontario residents who will receive special gold-plated award medals at ceremonies across the province this fall.

During her trip to Canada this fall, Queen Elizabeth will be presented with a solid gold replica of the volunteers' Bicentennial medal. The official announcement of the award-winners will be made in August.

Nominated by city council to receive the award are: Rev. Maury Blair, Barbara Hammond, Gary Clipperton, Richard Clewes, Claude Racey, Alberto Cataudella, Elias (Louis) Velianou, A.J. Brands, Jeffery (Ed) Armstrong, Donna Howard, Carole Berry, Harry Hassal Sr., and Lucy Turnbull.

Mississauga senior Lucy Turnbull has lobbied City Hall for seniors programs "since the days of the Township of Toronto," says her nominator, Ward 7 councillor Dave Cook.

Turnbull, of Camilla Rd., was "a driving force behind the decision of council in 1974, to consider senior citizens' programs the number 1 priority for our community," said Cook.

"Through Mrs. Turnbull's volunteer efforts and the efforts of her fellow senior citizens, council approved the development and construction of what is now the Cawthra Senior Citizen Centre," said Cook.
